Human Resources Training And Development

by Sowrabh Sharma, United States ⁽¹⁾

The recruitment of resources holds the key area of functioning in the human resources strategy of any business. The growth of the organization depends on the utilization and proper placement of resources as part of the human resources strategy. Every organization strives to spend considerable amounts in documenting human resources functions as the rightly developed resource contributes on a higher level. The recruitment of the fresh resources poses several key challenges to any firm. The resources need to be well equipped as per the human resource training and development plan. This methodology provides all the necessary functional information to the resource to manage the day-to-day work and attend to tasks independently.

HR training and development take part in business growth

There is considerable importance attached in any organization on the human resources training and development as the individual resources provide valuable insights and take part in the growth of the business. Though the business progress evolves around the environment in which it operates the functioning and observance of human resources strategy and its update immensely helps the firm. The human resources strategy comes in handy for the organization to be identified among its peers and symbolizes to the cherished values that it subscribes to. Many of the firms who extend support to causes like environmental concerns operate beyond their business goals to work with society. This will be done by incorporating such noble thoughts and ideas in their business development plan. This enables the employees to identify them with such causes and work towards their success.

Higher returns to the company

The growth of the companies depends entirely on the functioning of human resources and how fast they react to the changing situation in which they are operating. Any unskilled person if given proper training as part of human resources training and development program of the company, such resources deliver higher returns to the company. Though in the short run it takes a lot of time and attention in honing the skills of individuals is necessary, such focused approach molds the individual to develop character and to attend the tasks enlisted by the company with confidence.

The results must be shared

The driving force behind all the good work will have an intricate design and a well-crafted human resources strategy ensures that the trained resources deliver on their targets in a specified timeframe. As the human resources training and development involves considerable costs to the organization, the training must identify measurable targets for the individual resources. Each time when the resource completes a task, the results must be shared. As the scope of training enshrines guidance, a trainer must identify quickly the areas of improvement and continue to guide the resource to get expected results. The close observation and guidance ensure better results and the returns on the investments made in human resources development will help the company to make gains in its business. Well informed and trained resources will be able to function independently in all areas of business. This will help the company to plan and assign tasks that require independent functioning of the resource. A trained person brings measurable returns that the company expects and incentive such contributors working for business growth.
